

We're a dedicated five-person editorial team of debate junkies and for the online portal eurotopics.net we're looking for a

Social Media and Community Manager (for our Turkish language version)

who is:

- obsessed with the Internet and social media
- very active on Twitter/Facebook
- enthusiastic about all sorts of political, economic and social debates across Europe and in Turkey
- able to present our topics and stories to a Turkish social media audience
- ... and has native-level Turkish skills (and a very good command of English, good command of German is an asset).

Sound like you? Great! Here are some of the things you'll do while with us:

- Post our best topics and comments before and as they trend
- Write gripping headlines, posts and tweets
- Get in touch with our community on facebook and twitter
- Develop new (video) formats to present our topics and debates
- Spot and curate the content related to our topics
- Keep developing our social media strategy and analytics

You'll work five days a week part-time (1.5 hours per day, around noon, home office) from anywhere in Europe (preferably based in Turkey or Germany) starting in May.

Interested? Then send your CV and a letter about why you want to work with us to application@n-ost.org (as a pdf) by April 17. For any questions please get in touch with Andreas Bock: +49 (0) 30-259 32 83-12.

The press review eurotopics.net follows key debates in the European media and translates the best comments into four languages (English, German, French and Turkish). It's an initiative of Germany's Federal Agency for Civic Education produced by Berlin based journalist network n-ost.

n-ost is an international network linking journalists and media initiatives from the EU, Eastern Europe and neighbouring countries. As a media NGO we campaign for independent foreign reporting, media pluralism and access to information. Our network provides training and supports journalistic research with a cross-border approach and media monitoring.